Bugle Blast

by Allan Lindberg

Woodburn Estates & Golf has created several communication avenues, one is the Bugle Blast. The Bugle Blast is a rapid email system that performs all at one time, mass mailings to all subscribers. Bugle Blast has several subscriber lists and the two most common are WEG Members Only and General Interest.

The Members Only list is comprised of and reserved for members of Woodburn Estates & Golf where General Interest is for people who do not live in Woodburn Estates & Golf but would like to know what is happening in general or for events that are open to the public.

The WEG Members Only list is used to Blast (send mass emailing) important information to our WEG Member subscribers, particularly for items such as "Notice of Board of Directors Meeting" and "BOD Meeting Agenda".

The general list is used to inform subscribers about events or functions happening at Woodburn Estates & Golf that are open to the public such as the Pancake Breakfast, Craft Fair or Book Sale.

Woodburn Estates & Golf uses a specialized mass email service that requires email subscribers confirm their request to receive Bugle Blast emails. The service we use is free.

Many of you have heard of Bugle Blast and 757 have become subscribers. Unfortunately, of this, 125 are inactive, meaning blasts have not been opened. In addition, 24 members have entered their email incorrectly causing the email to "Bounce" or better known as undeliverable. On August 30, any registered member who has not opened a Bugle Blast in the last 6 weeks, will be deleted from the list.

If you are interested in receiving the Bugle Blast, please subscribe, either on our website or by picking up a request form at the News & Views bulletin board.

Curb Appeal Contest Winners

by Kathy Hiller

For a first-time Annual Curb Appeal Contest, WH Realty received 19 entries! Gift Certificates to Country Cottage in amounts from $100, $75, and $50 were on the line. All pictures have been posted on the bulletin board in the west wing of the clubhouse. The winners were announced at Lorrie Cox's National Night Out party on August 6th.

- First Place winners were Vern Hamilton & Karen Morris, 1340 Randolph Road.
- Second Place winner was Judy Owens, 1155 Princeton Road.
- Third Place winner was Nancy Grigorieff, 1698 Umpqua Road.
- Honorable Mention went to Mikhail & Lyudmila Kozyrev, 999 Delmoor Way.

Of the 19 entries received, I was disappointed that only one homeowner living south of Hwy 214 sent in an entry. Now, I know there are some beautiful homes and yards south of Hwy 214, and their only entry was one of the houses that I felt SHOULD enter, so I want to recognize Jack & Rita Hilton, 2071 W Hayes. Congratulations to all the winners; and those who did not enter should rethink that, since WH Realty will sponsor this contest again next year.

Finch Playfield

by Donna Wood

My family moved from the suburb of Central Park to Aberdeen, Washington, in the middle of my 6th grade year. A block from our new house was a large park called Finch Playfield. The front half was a playground with swings, wading pool, monkey bars, teeter totters, trapeze, rings, horseshoe pit, ping pong table, basketball court, merry-go-round, croquet court, and a large slide. The back of the park was mostly softball area and some bales of hay on which to hang targets for archery. There was also a small shed built onto the caretaker's house where we handed out board games to play if you were a regular and had a Finch Playfield

I worked summers at this park through junior high school. My job was to read to children at noon by the wading pool, hand out games and show children how to play them, and in general to see that the kids were safe and had a good time. The park was very well used, both day and evening. Almost every house in our neighborhood had children, but kids came from surrounding neighborhoods also. At the end of every summer we had a Field Day, with races and other competitions. I still have my ribbons: 2nd place in badminton, 1st place in badminton, archery and free throws.

In the evening it was mostly the junior high and high school kids who took over the park. Softball games were played while the odors of sulfur from the pulp mill in Hoquiam (our sister city) wafted over the park. Swings were pumped as high as they would go and the slide was waxed with wax paper to make the descent faster. Eventually, we developed many of our own rules for games. Chinese checkers became regular, streamlined (jumping any number of marbles in a straight line) and kangaroo (jumping spaces if you had the same number of spaces on either side of the marble or marbles you were jumping). In croquet, if you were frustrated by having your ball knocked around, you declared "Finch Playfield Rules" and began to cheat any way you could!

Today most of the equipment is gone from the park. Few children are seen there. Has money for parks dried up? Are children sitting home with their computers? Is the city afraid of being sued for injuries? Are parents trying to protect their children from possible injuries? It is sad when I think of the impact on the good health of my generation.

NEWS AROUND THE Savvy Caregiver NEIGHBORHOOD Training Program

Community Chorus Resumes

by Trudy Fowlks, Director

The Woodburn Community Chorus will resume rehearsals on Thursday, September 12. All rehearsals will be at 1 p.m. on Thurs. and will be held in the Activity Room at Country Meadows Village Independent Building (2nd floor just above the Lobby). This chorus is open to men and women in the area who are interested in joining their voices with others for the enjoyment of the group and our audiences.

You do not need to be able to sing parts to be part of this group. We mostly all sing melody, and sing for fun!! If you've been part of this group in the past, I hope you will be returning for another year. We also hope to encourage new singers to join us too. We plan to prepare a Christmas program to share during late November through December; and then will prepare another set of music to perform in the spring of 2020.

Please come and join this very enjoyable choral group. You can contact me ahead of time (if you wish at 503-982-8656) or just show up for the first rehearsal on September 12.

Music Makers' August 5 Meeting

by Dena Hollod

Joanne Mead and Jim Presley provided the entertainment and what a wonderful job they did. Toes were tapping and hands were clapping. We're hoping to get them back again soon. We have a new president, Doris Kruse, with husband Ralph taking over the treasurer's job. Our next meeting will be September 9. This will be my last article for this group, but I will still be with the group. Oh yes, most important news, we will meet every month of the year. No more three month break. So see you September 9 at 1 p.m. in the Woodburn Estates Auditorium. Come out and join us. You don't need to know how to play an instrument or sing. Just enjoying music is the only requirement!

Chocolate Wind Song

by Rick A. Wehler

The nuclear stress test heart specialist, Ian, called me Friday evening, at dinner time, with information, and his list of don'ts, for my Monday morning procedure.

Ian: "Mr. Wehler, the test will last two and a half hours."

Mr. Wehler: "What? I could give birth in two and a half hours."

Ian: "Mr. Wehler, it is mostly waiting for something to happen."

Mr. Wehler: "There you go, and please call me Rick."

Ian: "Rick, when you arrive, we will inject you with nuclear material and have you rest until it takes effect. Then we will have you lay on the imaging table, on your back with your knees up."

Rick: "Oh come on."

Ian: "Rick, we will take pictures as a baseline, and then put you on a treadmill and inject more material."

Rick: "Alright, alright, it's Friday. I'm supposed to have fun over the weekend, not be thinking about all of this crap."

Ian: "Rick, please do not eat or drink 6 hours before the test, and do not consume chocolate, or caffeinated beverages 12 hours before the test."

Rick: "Just a minute. (I mute the speaker.) Wifey, Sunday night, please feed my remaining malted milk balls, candy bars, chocolate milk and ice cream, and Dr. Pepper to the grandkids. And, and make a note to deduct the restocking fees from this geek's bill."

Wifey: "Hubber, Sunday night I'm going to spray myself, lightly, strategically, with my own perfume confection, Chocolate Wind Song."

Rick: "You're supposed to be on my side. Please pass me the chocolate milk." Rick: "Okay Ian, I'm back."

Ian: "Rick, please follow the simple instructions. I do not want you to barf

Rick: "Heh, that could be the highlight of my day."

End of the call.

Sunday night our grandkids, pigged out on my post-binge chocolate treats, laughed, talked nonsensically, and ran in circles, while I sat on the couch, alone with my thoughts, most of which focused on my chocolate-scented wifey.

Monday morning, Wifey drove us to the appointment, as I was suffering from withdrawal.

Angel, a lighthearted, stress-test nurse, greeted us, led me to a treatment room, inserted an I.V. and administered ½ milliliter of nuclear material. She said, "You can sit in the waiting room for 20 minutes until the drug takes effect."

I replied, "Oh no, my wife, Cora, is out there; and she smells like chocolate."

Angel looked at me quizzically, smiled politely, and led me to the waiting

Twenty minutes later, a sprightly nurse, Ariel, accompanied me to the scanning room. She applied four tapes onto my shaggy chest, attached as many electrodes, had me lay flat on my back, raise my hands above my head and my knees off of the table, braced by a cushion, and covered me with a warm blanket.

Ariel encouraged, "Relax, sleep if you like, while the machine takes baseline pictures for 13 minutes."

Afterwards she woke and walked me into the nuclear stress test lab, where I met Ian who didn't remember who I am.

I made an attempt at witty conversation, "I've been looking forward to this stress test all weekend."

Ian replied, "Mr. Wehler, you have a hairy chest. I must remove these four tapes, shave you, and position 10 tapes." I commented, "Too bad. My wife would enjoy peeling all ten of those off of hairy chest, slowly." He went about his business as I thought, "No chest hair, 16-years-old again.

Okay, Okay Cora, 23-years-old again." Ian instructed, "Mr. Wehler, we will have you walk on this treadmill that will run 1 mph for 4 minutes." I replied, "We who?"

Ian added, "Here is a chart that lists levels of discomfort once we (I didn't say we who?) Inject you with a larger amount of nuclear material. You may feel woozy, light-headed, weak, have blurry vision, abnormal heart beat, and feel the need for a bowel movement."

Ian did a countdown leading to the injection, and after that, a countdown during the injection. As I walked on the treadmill, I felt "all of the above".

Ian asked, "Mr. Wehler, tell me your discomfort level from this chart."

I tried as best I could to read it, maybe, "Fine, mild, medium, 7, awful, and I gotta take a dump."

I slurred, "Fime."

Ariel returned after my 4 minute mile, and ushered me to the scanning room

She smiled and stated, "We'll do the same as earlier but for only 12 minutes this time."

Afterwards she woke me, and removed my blanket, knee cushion, remaining hairless, electrode tapes and I.V.; and escorted me to the waiting room.

Wifey drove us home.

While I slept off the radiation; Cora showered off the Chocolate Wind Song.

Remembering Joan Marie DeCeglie

by Megan Pike (granddaughter)

There is a saying that, I believe, speaks to the soul of my Nana. It says that "creativity requires courage." In her heart, Joan was an Artist. From her sweeping oil paintings to her colorful gardens, she loved to bring beauty into the world. However, her greatest talent and her most refined skill, was her love for her family.

Joan lived many lives during her 88 years. She was a young, independent girl in New York in the 1930's. Later, a proud military wife, and a vibrant young woman raising daughters in California's Peace and Love era. She was the grandmother who held our hands as we picked strawberries on a hillside and sewed costumes for playtime. And she was a wandering spirit, traveling the coasts and jungles of Mexico with an easel and pallet. She finally set down roots (figuratively and literally) in Woodburn. Here, she planted another beautiful garden and cultivated equally beautiful friendships.

On July 16, 2019, Joan's spirit joined her beloved husband, Dan, and her daughter, Laura, in what she always called "the next great adventure." Joan's love lives on with her great grandchildren, grandchildren, daughters, sons-in-law, and friends whom she adored. We are all so grateful for the love and support of all of her friends in the Woodburn community throughout the years.

Please join us in remembering Joan on Saturday, August 24, from 11 a.m. – 2 p.m., at the Woodburn Estates Clubhouse in the Blue Room. (Address: 1776 Country Club Rd., Woodburn, OR 97071) Come and go as you please, and dress casually, just as Nana would have wanted! We will have light refreshments and, of course, coffee. Please contact Megan Pike, campdork@gmail.com, with any questions.

Birds can pick the most unusual spots to nest. A couple of weeks ago we discovered a tiny Junco sitting on a nest of 3 eggs. It was right by the back door in a fuchsia basket that sits on a pedestal and is automatically watered every other day. Between our frequent use of the door and every other day watering, we thought there was no way they could hatch. Each time we used the door, the bird flew away. When the weather turns warm we are out on the patio a lot, but she kept returning to the nest. We decided to use our bedroom door for entrance and exit to the patio to give her more space. Company cooperated by trooping through our bedroom too. Soon she was joined by the male, who stood watch while perched on the lip of the planter.

From my step-stool in the kitchen, I could look out the window and down on the nest, so I'd been checking on them quite often. I read that the incubation period was 12 to 14 days and time was running out. Then a couple of days ago, against all odds, two eggs hatched! My family was visiting when it happened and it was delightful to share the experience with a 4-year-old. The male approached the nest flitting from planter to planter, while the female climbed an orange electrical cord that runs from a fountain to an outlet behind the planter with the nest. That way she could climb in without being seen. Their chosen paths had not varied, but the head count had. The next morning we had chick number 3! It was easy to pick it out as it was very pink and had less down than its nest mates. They all looked like jelly beans with pencil eraser size heads. Were they cute? No, but they were beautiful. I gladly gave up convenience for a nest full of life!

Two days later, we left town to spend time with relatives. I wondered aloud how our little birds were doing and looked forward to seeing them as we headed home four days later. I came in the front door and headed right out to the patio. It was horrible. Something had knocked the fuchsia off the planter and it was laying on its side, dirt and leaves scattered across the tile and no sign of birds.

I picked the planter up and began to wiggle the nest from its place. That mama bird had certainly made a tight-fitting nest burrowed clear down in the dirt. It took me a few minutes to loosen it without disturbing the roots of the fuchsia. I'd lost the birds, but could save the plant. When I finally held the nest in my hand, I saw one lifeless little bird and began to cry. I know it is part of nature, but it still bothered me and I stroked the top of that little guy's head with one finger. As I did so, that little stinker began to bob its head! Within a few seconds its head reared back and that huge mouth opened. I was amazed that it had survived the fall and my husband agreed that it was probably very hungry. We had no idea how long it had been without the safety of parents and food. I wasn't too sure what to do, so my husband dug up a few worms and with the help of a pair of tweezers I got five or six tiny pieces of worm down its gullet. I then waited inside awhile to see if mama might show up, but she never did. Later, I brought the nest inside and set it next to me while I sent a frantic plea out to my Facebook friends. Help! What do I feed this little guy and how often? Once that was done, I called my vet's office and they gave me a few numbers to call.

On the third try I reached Turtle Ridge Wildlife Center in South Salem. They said I could bring the chick in right away, and off we went. It was 26 miles from home and way out in the country, so I was grateful for Google. We were there in short order and I walked in with my little friend still in its nest. A young girl took the nest and went through a door. I sat down and filled out some paperwork while the woman in charge told me the little bird looked healthy and would be put in an incubator with other little babies and fed every half hour. The girl came back in and handed me the little nest, but I sat it down to finish the paperwork and then forgot it when I left.

That evening I scrolled Facebook, and several people had replied to my plea for help. I found out that you can buy baby bird food at any pet food store. I had no idea!

It's been 3 days now and part of me wants to call about the little bird while the other part says, leave well enough alone. If I had done that in the beginning, I wouldn't be telling this story about nature and technology working together to give this little bird a chance. So I think I'll call!

Bucket List Travel Club

by Connie Cobb

After our meeting in the Conference room last Monday, Alice and I were discussing how much we loved talking about and hearing travel stories and how finding a good deal that will get you to your dream destination is one of life's great motivators.

As a group, we haven't settled on a date, type of trip or even where we want to go first, but, we're getting there. When someone mentioned a place they would like to go, almost always, someone else had been there and shared their stories of adventure. Anywhere we decide, anywhere in the world, all we need to know is that it's possible.

We'll all do some research and pick up our conversations at our next meeting. Because of Labor Day, our September meeting will be on Tuesday, Sept. 3 at 3pm in the conference room. Please join us – all are welcome.

The Greek philosopher Heraclitus is known for his famous quotation: "The only constant in life is CHANGE." Autumn reminds us of this fact. Our bodies, minds, and surroundings are changing. We ask ourselves, "What will tomorrow bring?"

As our surroundings such as plant life and length of days and nights change, so do our needs. We look for warmth, comfort, and various kinds of activities appropriate for the seasonal changes.

ADAPTATION becomes the keyword for survival. During the onset of autumn, let's focus our energies on helping each other "weather" the changes.

Recent World Iravels

by Linda Hanson

June 23rd, my 65th birthday, I started a trip to Mongolia. My first stop was Denny's for free breakfast! I rode the shuttle which makes transportation to the Portland airport really handy, and flew to San Francisco, Beijing and on to the capital city, Ulaanbaatar. I stayed with a pastor and his family for two weeks in the city of 1.3 million. His wife is a physical therapist, and I helped for several afternoons with one of her young clients. Their church had a weekend retreat outside of the city, in an old military hotel and I went and helped take care of the children. Thankfully, there were some bilingual young people there who also helped, because I don't speak a word of Mongolian!

The family also hosted a team from Singapore: doctors, physical therapists and building/construction experts. This team came to Mongolia as volunteers. I went with the building experts to visit a church that had some issues with electricity and water damage. It was interesting to hear the recommendations for fixing both issues, translated by the 20 year old daughter of the pastor. The Singaporeans spoke English, the 20 year-old was bilingual, and the pastor of the church spoke Mongolian.

The next two days were spent with the visiting medical professionals. We visited Mongolia's only trauma hospital. It sees several hundred people per day in the emergency room! I got to pass out gifts to children in the burn unit. Burns are common among families who live in yurts, heated by a wood stove with a cooking pot on top. The next day we visited a smaller rural hospital in a Muslim district of mostly Kurdish people. There was a throng of people filling the hospital hallway, waiting to be seen by visiting professionals. The two doctors saw patients all day long, in a cramped little exam room, sitting opposite each other and sharing one desk. Common ailments included high blood pressure in spite of medication, and heart issues. I don't know if this can be explained by the diet, but it's possible. They eat a lot of meat and dairy products, grease and salt. Fruits and vegetables are less common. The doctors did whatever they could at no charge, and gave out medication if they had it with them.

I took a train for 4 hours north to the town of Züünkhaara, population 30,000. There I stayed with another ministry called Tribal Bridge. This family has a goal of reaching out to a couple of isolated people groups who live in teepees (not yurts), and keep reindeer for meat, milk, artwork on the horns, and I'm sure they use every part possible. 7 people from the Youth with a Mission base in Montana, where I had attended a class two years earlier, also came. We built a shed in the backyard, hand mixing cement in an old bathtub, and using lumber from a pile of scraps. They were pretty talented and hard-working. I patched together the trusses.

All eight of us, along with the couple that started Tribal Bridge, and a hired driver with an old Russian van, drove for the better part of three days across streams, open pastures, muddy trails in the woods, rivers, up and down hills, and finally got to a horseman's cabin. We'd been sleeping in tents, and we spent one night beside his cabin. We were surrounded by horses, cows, sheep and goats. In fact, there are more animals than people in the country. His cabin is one room, made of logs, a little bigger than a yurt, but similar inside with beds around the edge and a wood stove in the middle.

Next morning he saddled about 15 horses and, with his helpers, they rode on ahead of us for about 10 miles. We drove the 10 miles, stopping in town to get groceries and the required permits to go into the National Park, where the reindeer people lived. Midday, when the road petered out, we met up with the horsemen and all of his horses. They gathered our backpacks and tents and sleeping bags and wrapped them in blue tarps and tied them to three pack horses. The horses are a little bit smaller than ours, I would guess in the 800 to 900 pound range. They are stout though and in good shape. In spite of just covering 10 miles, I don't think any of them had broken a sweat. We all climbed aboard and headed out for a two-day ride!

About 5pm it started to rain pretty hard. The ground was already wet and muddy, and many times the horses were up to their knees in water. We had just come upon an unfinished campground with open front A-frame cabins. We slept on the floor of the cabins that night, and cooked on a woodstove in a yurt that was also there.

The next morning, after a big pot of Cream of Wheat and raisins, we headed out for the last 5 hours on horseback. It was cool, and as we got higher there were fewer flies and mosquitoes. The last three-fourths of a mile was steep downhill and we all got off our horses and hand walked them down. We were walking in running water part of the time from all of the rain. When we got to the bottom, we got back on our animals and rounded a corner where we got our first glimpse of the reindeer people. It was like coming upon a scene from a western movie. There were 27 teepees, smoke coming out of the tops of some of them, and several dogs and children running around. There was a high-line setup to tie the horses to, and we were welcomed into one of the teepees. The older couple was probably in charge of this group of reindeer herders. We had milk tea, a common drink. I think it's about half milk, half water, a little bit of tea, and sometimes salt. A grandmother-type woman served us, wearing a traditional red Mongolian dress/coat that was ankle-length. It was exceptional to be inside a teepee, watching her pour steaming tea into small bowls for us!

For the next few nights we slept in teepees on wooden platforms about a foot off the ground. We had wood stoves in the middle to keep warm. The fire didn't last through the night, but it helped take the chill off when it was raining outside. I wore lined jeans, long underwear, and sometimes a warm jacket. One afternoon it didn't rain and we played for several hours with the children. There were about 15 of them and we taught them how to do the hokey pokey, play London Bridge is falling down, red light-green light, and a little soccer. None of us spoke the language, but sometimes a translator helped, and sometimes we taught by doing.

We cooked our own food which was mostly sardine sandwiches, Cream of Wheat, canned meat with rice or canned meat with noodles. The top of the wood stove comes off and a round bottom cooking pot fits in its place. It's efficient, but the easiest meals are soups, and boiled foods. Water came from the river but we boiled what we drank. The bathroom was a hole in the ground with planks across the top to stand on. We were welcome to visit other teepees, and we sometimes did. I met a woman who was having a birthday and I sang to her. We had little gifts that we distributed, including some soaps that I bought at a garage sale here in the Estates. They were handmade and I wish I could thank the person who made them but I don't know who it was.

There were quite a few reindeer in camp. Both male and female have horns. Either the mothers or babies are tied up, to keep the other one nearby. Some of the mothers are milked, and then their babies are released to nurse after that. The milk is very creamy and can be made into butter. The babies wean themselves by about four months, because their horns are too big to permit them to nurse. They live to be about 23 years old I was told.

The teepees are only one layer of canvas. Some families go to town in the winter time, and the children go to school. Other children go to live in a dormitory during the school year but the adults live in teepees year-round. I think they go to lower elevations in the winter. It would be a harsh life. By allowing outsiders to come and visit, and rent some of the teepees, the leader of the tribe said that their lives have been improved. They often are given gifts, and even things like glass jars that we emptied, are reused.

It rained really hard one day, and we prayed that the next day when we were scheduled to leave, we wouldn't be riding in a downpour. Our prayers were answered, and although it was muddy, we were not rained on for the ride back to meet the vehicles. The horses were going home so we made the trip in just one day. The next couple of days we spent retracing our route through deeper creeks and rivers, and muddier tracks through the woods. I don't think I've ever seen so

We were eager for showers, but that had to wait one more day because of plumbing issues where we'd been staying. The next day we walked a few blocks to public showers and were rewarded with fresh clean water! We take so much for granted! Not every household has running water like we do!

I'm very thankful to have had the opportunity to travel. There are two groups of reindeer people and we saw the most distant. It is quite interesting to know that people can live in teepees side-by-side, sharing almost everything except the small space inside their teepee. They were hospitable, and we were always offered tea if we visited. The children are eager for someone new to play with, and laughter is universal. Horses seem well cared for, and were staked out for the duration of our visit. The tack leaves a little to be desired, but it's functional. I gave a Leatherman knife to a man who was repairing a saddle by retying rawhide strings and stretching rawhide across the frame.

Traveling is a blessing, and I've met new friends, and gained more insight into how similar we are in spite of geography and beliefs. I am drawn to grandmotherly women, whether they are milking reindeer or carrying grandchildren on their backs. Smiles and hugs are welcome and understood everywhere.

"Don't pass up an opportunity for adventure," an older friend once told me, and I am thankful for her advice. God also said "Go..." and so I will. Papua New Guinea is next.

The Taxi Ride from Manchester, England to Conwy, Wales

by Christine Edick (writing group member)

Put on your seatbelt, you're in for a ride today!

We are nearing the end of our nearly month-long international trip and, while growing a bit weary, we are looking forward to the last destination on our itinerary: Conway, Wales. We left Edinburgh, Scotland, this morning and boarded a plane for Manchester, England. Once we landed in Manchester, we were going to purchase tickets for the train to Conwy, but we met Michael Daniel Patrick Keene instead.

You see, the train would take us four hours to get to Wales and Michael Daniel Patrick Keene, a delightful cab driver, could get us there in a little over an hour. We discussed a fair price, he turned off his meter, and away we went, leaving the train station behind.

Now Michael Daniel Patrick Keene is not a young man, well into his mature years, we figured somewhere close to 80 and perhaps beyond. He told us he had never been to Conwy before, but he could get us there, not to worry.

Michael Daniel Patrick Keene drove a very traditional English cab without all the modern conveniences of GPS, air conditioning, and truth be told, I don't remember if he had seat belts, but I'm sure he must have had them. I'm not even sure if he had a cell phone (or mobile as they call it in the UK). I didn't see him looking at any modern electronic device, but he did have a few maps strewn about the front area of the cab.

Oh my, it was an adventure! We chatted the entire journey, talking about his life and ours. We learned that he married and buried two wives and now was on his own again. He enjoyed his life as a cabbie, it was his lifelong occupation. Well, before we knew it, Conwy signs started showing up along the motorway so we knew we were going in the right direction.

Once we arrived in the town, Michael Daniel Patrick Keene stopped his cab in the middle of the street and asked a local where our hotel was located. The town was built in the 1200's – It is a walled city and the streets are too narrow for two-way traffic so everything is routed one-way. Good old Michael Daniel Patrick Keene missed the street a few times (there are only about three main streets in the town) so we had to circle around a couple of times to find our hotel.

When he felt he had enough circling, Michael Daniel Patrick Keene just kind of ran the taxi up on the sidewalk a bit, and dropped us off. People who were walking on the sidewalk had to back out of his way. He was a real gentleman and helped us with our luggage, getting it out of the cab. I should have snapped a photo of this hilarious scene, but he was parked upon the sidewalk, and pedestrians were trying to get by. As it turned out, he missed the hotel by half a block, se we did have to hike up the hill a bit to get to the hotel entrance, but that's okay. He delivered us to Conwy!

It was the most amusing ride in a cab that we've ever had. Michael Daniel Patrick Keene said he had a great time, too. I asked him if he was going to stay in town for a bit and look around. He said no, he'd seen enough, and now he could tell people he'd been to Conwy. What a character!
